

Ever since I bought my plane in 1994 I've made numerous trips to the College Park Airport in College Park, MD. Aside from being the oldest operating airport in the United States and the great museum next door it is also across the street from a Metro stop. It is the most convenient way for me to get to the nation's capital. I've flown in not just to see the National Air and Space Museum but also the other attractions in the city. I've even flown in to see hockey games at MCI Center. Every time I've flown in from the Allentown area of PA I was able to get flight following from Baltimore Approach and then Washington Approach. I have no problems with filing a flight plan (I'm a VFR pilot), squawking a specified transponder code, or even submitting to a background check. I would just like to continue to visit College Park. I understand the requirements for security and would be more than willing to help out in anyway possible. Please allow myself and countless others the freedom to land at College Park Airport. Thank You. Edward S. Figuli, JR.
